The Houston Housing Authority (HHA) Moves Forward Under New Leadership

The Houston Housing Authority (HHA) is moving forward with a leadership transition. Ms. Jennine Hovell-Cox, who until her recent appointment served as SVP and General Counsel of HHA, has graciously agreed to step in as Interim President and CEO. Ms. Hovell-Cox brings a wealth of experience and commitment to our mission, and we are confident her leadership will help move our agency forward. Under her leadership, our top priority is to continue to provide our community with safe, reliable housing and supportive services.

“We appreciate the hard work that our staff has put in thus far and we are focused on bringing stability to this agency as we navigate this transition and continue to be transformative in the business. Our top priority is, and will always be, delivering excellence to the residents we serve. We are actively working to improve our housing facilities to enhance the quality of life for our residents,” says Hovell-Cox.

The HHA board and leadership are working hard to ensure the right decisions are made to help the community while also providing a supportive and healthy work environment, internally. Within that mission, HHA will remain committed to transparency and will provide additional updates as they become available.

“The HHA Board is focused on accountability, transparency, and serving Houstonians. That is why we have made the decision to move in a new direction and appoint Hovell-Cox as Interim President and CEO. We are confident that she will take HHA in a more positive direction and will guide us through these changes and transitions,” says Board Chairman Jody Proler.

The HHA understands that strong community partnership is built on trust, respect, and cooperation and is working with stakeholders to build a positive future. A feedback-driven culture is critical as we focus on our next chapter.
